SPO members campaign to save their funding at a recent UNO hockey game.

UNO students say yes to SPO

KIMBERLY BRYANT
News editor

In a previous visit from a campus favorite, Psychic Suzanna, was asked how the SPO situation would pan out. Her prediction? It would all blow over.

And she was right.

Homecoming, Welcome Week and a plethora of campus speakers and entertainers will continue to entertain the students of UNO.

The Student Programming Organization held a revote on Tuesday and Wednesday to regain the funding the organization lost in the student election last fall.

In the revote, students said yes to SPO. A total of 331 votes were received.

Out of the 331 students who voted, 287 or 86.71 percent, voted in favor for the organization, otherwise known as the campus speakers program. Only 42 students, or 12.69 percent, voted no and two students, 0.60 percent, had no opinion.

In regards to the results of the revote,

Candidate for next NU president to be in place by April

L. Dennis Smith

The days until retirement are winding down for University of Nebraska President L. Dennis Smith.

The Presidential Advisory Search Committee is currently in the process of reviewing and narrowing down applications that have been submitted for the position of NU President.

"It's starting to move," said

Keith Olsen, search committee co-chair.

The goal of the 17-member committee is to create a final list of candidates for submission to the University of Nebraska Board of Regents.

Olsen said only the selected candidates will be announced.

The committee has received 40 nominations so far and the candidates will be interviewed once the finalists have been chosen.

"The goal is to have a list of candidates to the Board of Regents by April," said Olsen. Four ideal candidates have to be chosen and the Board of Regents will then decide on who is the prime candidate for the position.

"Candidates must appreciate the state of Nebraska and the diversity of the state," said Olsen.

He also added that candidates need to understand and have an appreciation for the land grant system and have the ability to work with all people of the state and the legislature.

"It's a big order to fill," he said. "It's extremely important that the future NU president is a person with a vision for the university."

President L. Dennis Smith's last day is June 30.

College students are never too old for chicken pox

KIMBERLY BRYANT
News editor

For busy college students, chicken pox is the last thing that's on their minds. However, recent cases of chicken pox have prompted Student Health Services to inform the students of UNO about the risks for adults who contract chicken pox.

"We know from talking to Omaha Public Schools that in Omaha, Nebraska, chicken pox are alive and well," said Marcia Adler, director of UNO's Student Health Services.

Student Health Services recently had a student come in with a case.

So you're probably thinking, "Chicken pox is a kid's disease. Why should I care?"

It is significant because when adults get chicken pox, the risk of pneumonia, bacterial skin infections and brain damage is increased because the virus can cause nerve damage.

"An adult that gets chicken pox needs to take it very seriously," Adler said.

Adler said that once a person has had chicken pox, the virus lays dormant in the nerve endings in the body.

"When the body is in a compromising state health wise, the virus may resurface on the skin, this time with painful lesions," Adler said. The painful lesions are herpes, which is in the same virus family as the chicken pox.

If you are exposed to chicken pox virus, you have up to 21 days for sores to appear on your body. Anyone who is pregnant or undergoing cancer or HIV treatment should tell

New club shoots for success

KYLE J. LYNN
Staff writer

There are tons of clubs at UNO, but one may have slipped under your radar...the Billiards Club.

The club actually existed more than 40 years ago when UNO had pool tables in the Milo Bail Student Center. It really started to take form in the spring of 2003 under the guidance of Josh Shipman and Rob Ruiz.

In commending the membership's involvement and commitment to the club's success, Shipman said, "It's really the members that have helped things take off."

Currently the Billiards Club meets at Family Fun Center located at 67th and Dodge Streets on the second floor. Family Fun Center has 15 available pool tables and provides patrons with pool cues, chalk and balls, but one can bring his own cue if he wants. The club meets Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. until they've exhausted themselves. The club has arranged an agreement with Family Fun Center and plays for only $3 per hour.

While the local club has been around for more than 40 years, no one really knows the origin of billiards. Some people believe the origin comes from France, Spain, Italy, and even Ancient Greece. The origin is confused by the fact that two distinct variations of the game exist. In British settling areas of the world, the game consisted of three balls and was played on a table with six pockets.

The European-influenced game,

UNO gallery hosts two new exhibits

RAE LICARI

Entertainment editor

The UNO Art Gallery in the Weber Fine Arts Building will present a pair of openings tonight to celebrate the two new exhibits on display.

"Artists as Art Teachers - Art Teachers as Mentors," features 25 art educators from area K-12 schools, all of whom are graduates of UNO's Department of Art and Art History or the College of Education. Each educator selected a pair of students to work with on the exhibit, which coincides with Youth Art Month.

The art educators will also provide commentaries on their roles as artists and mentors, in addition to their artworks.

A traditional opening for the adult artists will be held from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. today in the gallery. A Youth Art Month celebration will be held from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Feb. 29, and will include refreshments and hands-on art activities.

Also opening tonight is "The Prairie Suite - A Study of Place," a print series that examines visual representation of the prairie and its transformations. The exhibit, which features a dozen works from printmakers throughout the Midwest, is located in the Hexagon Gallery of the UNO Art Gallery.

Both exhibits will be open through March 5.

The gallery is open to the public, and admission is free. Gallery hours are as follows: 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Wednesday and Friday and noon to 8 p.m. Thursday.

For more information, contact Deborah-Eve Lombard, the gallery's director, at 554-2796.

his or her physician if they have been exposed.

Chicken pox is spread through coughing, sneezing and physical contact such as talking or hand shaking.

Symptoms of chicken pox include a general feeling of not feeling well, a low-grade temperature, a runny nose and sore throat. The symptoms are similar to a cold since a virus causes both. The last symptom is when fluid-filled lesions, break out at different times, as opposed to being all at once. Students feel the first set of symptoms until the pox break out.

Once the pox are out, the student feels better, Adler said.

She added that the issue with the lesions is that after they appear the fluid inside the lesions is also contagious.

The total recovery period, which is from breakout until the day they heal, can be up to 10 days.

Acyclovir is a medication that can be taken to shorten the severity of the outbreak. However, it is costly, $100 for a prescription.

Treatment includes isolating the patient until lesions are dry, taking baths with baking soda or Aveeno baths, using topical solutions such as caladryl and calamine lotion, drinking lots of fluids such as water and fruit juice and paying attention to other symptoms that come with the pox. Adler said if a UNO student is diagnosed with chicken pox, there is a procedure to follow: The student needs a letter from their doctor if the medical absence is extended. The note needs to be forwarded to SHS or Rita Henry, the assistant vice chancellor for student services. The student then needs to contact each of his or her professors to make arrangements for any schoolwork that was missed.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends that college students get the varicella vaccine to prevent contracting the illness. Adler said the vaccine isn't mandatory.

"What we know is that about 40 percent of people who have been vaccinated still come down with the disease in their lifetime," she said. "However, with the vaccine, the pox are less severe and shorter in duration."

commonly known as Carom, also consists of three balls but is played on a table without pockets. The Spanish supposedly introduced the game to America on a table without pockets.

Also, some believe that the game of billiards originated from croquet, which was brought indoors and raised to table height for convenience. The table was covered green to imitate grass. Further development of the game is undocumented.

"Like cards," Shipman said, "billiards has many different varieties and forms."

There are many games and variations that can be played on a pool table ranging from the most commonly known like eight ball or nine ball. Club members also like to show off with different trick shots.

Even though the club is still in its structuring phase, the current members will be holding elections shortly.

The club is open to anyone interested in the game of pool. The game has made the jump from bars to homes and is something that everyone can enjoy. The Billiards Club offers a way to meet new people and get helpful tips on how to improve skills.

Some members even compete against other universities. If you'd like to join or would just like some more information about the club you can get a hold of the club by e-mailing UNO_Billiards@yahoo.com.

Student Government Speaker Vince Drieling said, "It looks like students agreed the original wording of the ballot was unclear."

SPO was previously voted against in the last student government election, held Oct. 14 and 15. Many blamed the wording on the election ballot, which was considered to be confusing.

A total of 425 students voted against the funding while only 395 voted in favor of the program. It was the first time that students voted against the SPO funding.

At that time, SPO faced a loss of more than $100,000 in funding.

If SPO had lost the funding, it just would have been absorbed into the Student Government's reserve fund and students would have still paid the fee of $2.95 per student in their tuition.

Jono Croskey, Student Government president, said that he hopes the situation with SPO helps all campus organizations not to take student support for granted. "I hope that we work together more for the benefit of the university."

Dating auction offers fun, giving experience

MARQUITA GOVAN
Staff writer

You may not be able to buy love, but you could have bought a date.

The second annual Date Auction was held Wednesday night at the University Village. The Date Auction is a yearly fundraiser for various charities in Omaha. The event started five years ago as part of a civic awareness program at the University of Kansas and it became a significant way to give back to the community as part of their residence life program.

Kent Lavene, assistant director of University Village and former complex director at KU, has helped organize five such events between the two universities.

The date auction became a "big production" drawing large crowds.

One of the biggest lures for last year's date auction was the dinner and activities that accompanied each date.

At last year's auction, music was provided to keep the crowd pumped. Packing a full house, residents from all over University Village got the opportunity to mingle with other UNO students.

Date Laura Haberman, a sophomore psychology major, said that a lot more people than she had expected attended the event. She said she participated because she thought it would be a new way to meet people, plus the money went to charity.

"It was a great way not only to meet people in your building, but people around you and it was a fun way to give back to the community," Haberman said. "It was something new that students hadn't experienced before."

Sophomore Scott Marnell also said the event was a good way to meet people and have some fun.

"So many people got to hang out at once, people from the Hill and the Valley," he said.

"Half of University Village was there and you got to see who people were bidding on and what type of people were buying dates."

Lavene also felt that the event had a lot of benefits for residents.

"It seems to be something that even those jaded residents get excited about even if they don't come to any other program this year, they'll come to this one," Lavene said.

Lavene also said that it makes him feel good to know that the proceeds are being donated to a charity that provides support to people who have lost a loved one. He also said that even if residents don't buy a date, he thinks that being part of something that is giving to the community is enough.

"It instills a sense of giving to our residents that will stay with them throughout their college years as they graduate from college and beyond," Lavene said.

More than $1,000 was raised at last year's date auction and Lavene helped to raise more than $2,500 while he was at KU. Along side the good cause, Haberman said that she would definitely encourage students to participate in the date auction as a date, bidder or observer.

"I think it is a great way to put yourself out there," she said. "You can meet people and it shows how personable you are, and its fun," she said.

Disney gives Miracle to American cinema

J. PARKER ADAIR
Sports editor

If you don't shed a tear, you're not human. If you don't leave the theatre with an overwhelming sense of pride, you have no heart. If you still think it was just a hockey game, check your pulse.

The average college student was not born when the U.S. Hockey Team defeated the Soviets in the 1980 Olympics. And up until now, it was an emotion that was never seen.

On Feb. 6, director Gavin O'Connor brought the emotion that was felt in every American home on February 22, 1980 to the big screen.

Miracle is the story of 20 young men from the United States that did the impossible. They beat the unbeatable. And who better to bring us this story than the Walt Disney Co.?

Kurt Russell filled the role of U.S. Hockey Coach Herb Brooks. Russell matches the voice patterns and inflections of the legendary coach perfectly. Brooks' former players even agreed.

Making the perfect cast was the same task Brooks faced when he assembled the hockey team in June 1979. Disney took a tip from Brooks, when they cast hockey players who could act rather than actors who could skate. This, along with camera angles not seen before, made for the most realistic sports scenes ever on screen.

Miracle is shot mostly through Brooks' eyes, and that is where most of the complaints come from. The plot may get a bit confusing, or seem as though it has nothing to do with the team, but to understand the team a person has to understand Brooks.

Brooks had wanted to coach the Olympic team since 1960, when he was the last player cut from the team. He went on to a successful coaching career, capped off by several national championships at the University of Minnesota. Brooks tried to convince American hockey that it needed to change its style to compete with the rest of the world.

He convinced U.S. Hockey to hire him as a coach, and he coached his own way, not caring what anyone else said. His fast paced style of play and extreme conditioning were key to the hopes of Olympic success.

An argument against seeing the film is that people already know what happened. The so-called Titanic effect holds no water. At the time, Titanic was the highest-grossing film of all-time. Miracle could do the same. It is Disney in every sense of the word, but it really touches the hearts of American citizens. In a time of war, Miracle is a sure bet, and it is far from disappointing.

Joslyn shows visual fables

AMANDA GOREY
Staff writer

A fable is a feigned story or tale intended to instruct or amuse or a fictitious narration intended to enforce some useful truth or precept. A fable is in fact, a written form of art. "Fabulism," a new exhibit at the Joslyn Art Museum, is now open, and shows the way fables can also become visual.

The Fabulism exhibition concentrates on the work of five painters: Carroll Dunham, Ellen Gallagher, Chris Ofili, Neo Rauch and Matthew Ritchie. These artists' creations are inspired more by Cosmicomics (Italo Calvin's fables of the universe) than by Disney-like cartoons, by invention rather than appropriation of mass media, by activities that transform rather than transgress — all with a healthy dollop of shock and wonder. Not since the psycho-visual excesses of Surrealism, or perhaps the more recent exaggerated characters in the art of Philip Guston and Peter Saul, have we been confronted with such ravishing strangeness and complexity. These five do not share a unified visual and intellectual front, but create within the broad range of viewpoints voiced within contemporary art. Their individual influences range from scientific treatises to Mayan glyphs to hip-hop music; their works range from the schematic painter lines and intricate narrative of Matthew Ritchie's mythic cosmology to the over-the-top craft-like decorativeness of Chris Ofili's icons of Afro-centric spirits.

Common themes and influences exist within this diversity and are explored in the exhibit and the accompanying catalogue. Both Dunham and Gallagher, for instance, share an interest in infusing narrative into the geometric rigors of 1960s minimalism. In turn, Dunham influenced the visual outcome of Ritchie's apocalyptic tales. And Gallagher has a common interest with Ofili in converting racial and/or racist clichés into Afro-validation. The hypnotic performers of nonsensical tasks who are found in Rauch's canvases are drawn from the socialist realism of the former East Germany. But the odd stillness of space and sense of alienation within his paintings is also akin to that found in Dunham's most recent fragmented figuration. Seen together, all five painters rearticulate painting's age-old claim to the meaning and magic of wonder.

Klaus Kertess, the current curator of contemporary art at the Joslyn, organized "Fabulism". The exhibit is sponsored in part by the Rose Blumkin Foundation, Joan Gibson and Donald Wurster, and Catherine and Terry Ferguson.

The Joslyn is located on 22nd and Dodge Streets. "Fabulism" continues through April 25. The exhibit is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. Admission is $6 for adults and $3.50 for students and seniors. Children younger than 4 years old are free. More information can be found by visiting www.joslyn.org.

While Andre 3000 of Outkast drew praise from much of the country for his performance during the Grammy Awards, some Native Americans are not happy. Several Native groups are calling for a boycott of the CBS network, deeming Andre 3000's neon green Native American attire offensive. The rapper and backup dancers wore green buckskin dresses and green buckskin leggings. A tipi with smoke billowing out of it was used as a background prop during the performance. Andrew Brother Elk, chair of the Native American Cultural Center in San Francisco, filed a formal complaint with the FCC. He called the performance the "most disgusting set of racial stereotypes aimed at American Indians...ever seen."

A CBS spokesman issued an apology, saying the network was "very sorry if anyone was offended by the performance."

Rapper Lil' Zane continues to expand his acting resume. After starring in the hit film Finding Forrester, Dr. Doolittle 2 and The Fighting Temptations, Zane will star in a new straight-to-video suspense thriller, Motives.

The movie centers around a successful business man who engages in an adulterous affair that ends in murder. Vivica A. Fox, Golden Brooks and Shemar Moore also star in the movie.

The movie lands in video stores Feb. 24.

Big Grammy winner, Beyoncé Knowles, said she is in contention for the role of Lois Lane in the next Superman movie. For the past few weeks, rumors have circulated confirming and denying that she was a contender.

Plenty of heart in Valentine's Day weekend

Parker Adair

Can't lose

Men everywhere will spend a large amount of money this weekend on their women. There will be the nice dinner, flowers and maybe a ring or some other expensive gift. All of this in hopes of staying out of the doghouse for another year and yet it only takes up a few hours of the weekend.

This weekend is not short on things to do, and it gives people a chance to see people giving their heart for something they love.

Imagine starting your date a day early, right here on campus. After class on Friday, you can pick up your date at the ever-romantic Fireplace Lounge. From there, you can grab some chocolates, or at least chocolate bars from the convenient store, and some wine (or, in this case grape juice) before you head out for a great Valentine's Day weekend. Hop into your 1978 Pinto and head down I-80 to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

As you pull up to the Devaney Athletic Center, you can explain to your surprised date that the two of you will be able to watch the UNO women's track and field team compete at the Prairie Wolf Invitational. The event starts at 3 p.m., so you get to see most of the field events as well as some of the running events before you have to head back to your car for leg two of your romantic weekend.

You two lovebirds head back down I-80, heading to the lovely Sapp Fieldhouse. The field house is conveniently located at the center of the UNO campus, so you can hang out with all your single friends without feeling awkward.

Now you and your sweetheart get to enjoy a stellar wrestling match. The UNO wrestling team hosts Minnesota State-Mankato at 7 p.m. Maverick wrestlers have put their heart and soul into their work. The sacrifice they give is quite beautiful. I'm sure your honey-bunny will enjoy it. You can watch five-ranked wrestlers take on the No. 12 Mankato State team. At intermission, you can enjoy a romantic dinner of a hot dog, nachos and a Pepsi.

As you drop your date off at her car on top of the garage, you get a sweet little peck on the cheek, and tell her that you will pick her up at 8 a.m., so you can make your way back to Lincoln.

The third leg involves more great athletes displaying their hearts at the Adidas Open at Devaney. You can see seniors Shausha Lee, Laura Cass, Mandy Neneman and the rest of the team try to set automatic qualifying marks in the second to last meet before the North Central Conference Championships.

You and your smoochie-kins grab another romantic lunch at the 3-in-1 McDonald's before heading back to the love shack known as the Sapp Fieldhouse.

You see Mitch Waite and J.D. Naig take on St. Cloud State during senior night. As you and your princess witness the last home meet of the season, she builds an infatuation with heavyweight Les Sigman.

After the match, she meets the sweaty man beast and quickly ditches you for him.

"Honey, you're sweet," she says, "but Les is like a big teddy bear. I'm sure he wouldn't drag me to some sporting event on Valentine's Day!"

She does have a point, but what's more important, supporting your Mavs or some gorgeous perfect girl? Obviously, it's the Mavs.

That's when the light bulb goes off above your head, and you decide to take the three dozen roses you bought for your sweetie pie to the track meet in Lincoln. The 34 women on the team think that you are just the world's sweetest and you've become the best thing for track since shoes.

They flocked to you after UNO Assistant Coach Joe Erdkamp threw you into a wall. So, maybe giving him one of the flowers meant the misunderstood you for a cast member of Queer Eye, but you did get the team to laugh.

Your Valentine's Day ended nicely and you did get a few numbers. From Laverne Monger you got 7:46, her automatic time in the 60-meter dash. Molly Miller gave you 4:51.30, her qualifying time in the mile run. And maybe, just maybe you got a date for that evening, or at least a few hugs. In any case, you got to see some awesome displays of heart, and got to find out that Valentine's Day is more than just what happens after the lights go out. Plus Les Sigman is your new best friend.

Wrestlers earn split, rankings over weekend

J. PARKER ADAIR

Heading into the weekend, the Maverick wrestling team knew it would meet some tough challenges. UNO had a good showing against No. 2 Central Oklahoma, despite a 22-12 loss, Friday. On Saturday, UNO knocked off rival Nebraska-Kearney 26-15.

In the weekend's first match, the third-ranked Mavericks faced two-time defending national champion Central Oklahoma. The Bronchos boasted a barrage of seniors while the Mavs have none in the starting lineup. Experience proved to be important as UCO won seven matches.

Third-ranked Chris Saferite defeated Dustin Tovar of the Mavs by a 3-2 decision at 125-pounds. The most highly anticipated match of the night was then No. 5 Mitch Waite against UCO's Cole Province. Province, ranked first, is a three-time defending national champion that knocked off Waite in the national finals a year ago. The Broncho mounted all of the offensive points, and won 6-3.

Eli Dominguez won 6-5. The win over Wade Bramlitt helped move the Mavericks into the 141-pound rankings.

Then No. 7 Patrick Allibone, who has had a great year to this point, lost to Jerod Goodwin 6-3.

Former Iowa Hawkeye, Chas DeVetter, won another match that helped slide him into the rankings at 157. His pin in 3 minutes, 55 seconds gave the Mavericks their ninth point of the evening.

UNO could not use that momentum as UCO won the next four matches. J.D. Naig lost 8-0 in convincing fashion. His opponent Sean Silvis is ranked first nationally at 165. Second-ranked Jason Tapia defeated redshirt freshman Steve Conlin 11-5. Bryan Tapley (184) and No. 3 Kevin Lochner (197) posted three-point wins over then No. 8 Nate Oviatt and Ben Strandberg, respectively.

Heavyweight Les Sigman won a 3-0 decision to close the evening. Sigman, ranked first nationally, defeated No. 8 Chris Finn.

A year ago, they had lost to Central Oklahoma on a Friday at home before knocking off the Lopers also at the Sapp Fieldhouse. UNO hoped to repeat the victory on the road as they headed into Kearney on Saturday.

Allibone started things off for the Mavericks with a second-period pin. The pin of Pat True at 3:47 was the first of four consecutive UNO victories. DeVetter's 12-3 win over Tyler Herman helped move him into seventh in the latest rankings. Conlin then knocked off Caleb Young 8-2, and Nate Oviatt defeated Zac Rice 8-5 putting the Mavs up 19-0.

UNK's first victory came at the expense of Strandberg. Second-ranked Jeff Sylvester pinned Strandberg in 41 seconds. Sigman retaliated by dominating another opponent with his 12-2 win over Jered Jorgensen.

All-American No. 2 Bryce Abbey won as expected over Tovar. The Maverick wrestler made it close losing only by four. The Lopers needed a pin in that match to keep hopes of an upset alive.

That didn't mean much to No. 7 Adam Keiswetter. Keiswetter was faced with a rematch of a thrilling bout from a year ago that was won by Mitch Waite. Waite found himself in the high profile match for the second night in a row. This one was not nearly as close, and Keiswetter won with a pin at 3:42. The second loss on the weekend for Waite dropped him to No. 7 and propelled Keiswetter to sixth.

Eli Dominguez handed the True family its second loss of the evening. Dominguez beat Pat's brother Matt 12-5. The win boosted Dominguez to a No. 8 ranking.

The Mavs host their final home duals of the year this weekend. The Maverick-Maverick dual takes place Friday at 7 p.m. when UNO hosts the Minnesota State-Mankato Mavericks. UNO will meet St. Cloud State for a Valentine's Day massacre at 3 p.m.

Tennis team suffers defeat

KYLE J. LYNN

The Maverick tennis team suffered an agonizing defeat against a pair of Division I opponents over the weekend, earning their first losses of the year.

Host UNO was shut out 7-0 by Creighton last Saturday at Hanscom Park Tennis Center. The Mavs also fell to Wichita State 7-2 last Sunday.

The 7-0 score meant that Creighton won all six singles matches and all three doubles matches for the doubles-point.

No. 3 singles junior Lindsay

Henjum and No. 6 singles sophomore Abby Wilson surpassed most of their team's efforts by dragging their opponents into tiebreakers.

Henjum won the first set in her match 7-5, but then lost the next one 6-4. The tiebreaker resulted in a 10-6 loss.

Wilson lost her first set 6-4, but then battled to win her second match 7-5. Wilson began the tiebreaker ahead, but unfortunately she slipped on her uphill climb with a 10-6 loss in the tiebreaker.

On Sunday, Wilson was determined not to suffer the same fate as the previous day. She won her first set 6-2, but struggled in her second set, losing by the same score. She battled through the tiebreaker and came out on top 10-5, bringing her season record to 2-1.

The No. 3 doubles, junior Sarah Huls and freshman Maggie Russel defeated their opponents in a long doubles match, 8-6.

The Mavs will head to St. Peter, Minn. today to take on Gustavus Adolphus. They will then play Winona State and North Dakota Saturday, both of which made it to the NCAA tournament last year and should be quality opponents.

Condom Caper visits University Village

MARQUITA GOVAN

Staff writer

In celebration of "Sexual Responsibility Week" and since February is National Condom Month, University Village residents were greeted by the Condom Man, the mascot of the "Condom Caper" event, Monday as they entered the clubhouse.

Dressed in a full-body contraception, Condom Man, whose slogan is "To protect and serve," encouraged residents to participate in the treasure hunt for condoms and other activities aimed at sexual health. Troy Bendickson, a criminal justice and political science major, felt volunteering as Condom Man was "the right thing to do."

"I wanted to get the word out about safer sex," he said.

The event was co-sponsored by Planned Parenthood, UNO Student Health Services, and the Nebraska AIDS Project. Participants hunted for zip-lock bags, which were filled with candy, condom instructions, water-based lubricant and sexual health trivia questions. Students were to collect condoms in the clubhouse where they could also pick up prizes for answering trivia questions correctly or for collecting the most condoms. A right answer could earn residents T-shirts and water bottles provided by Campus Recreation's Mav-Rec Wellness Stampede program and gift certificates to area restaurants and grocery stores.

University Village resident Brian Hunter decided to come to the event because he said it was a fun way to get people to learn about safe sex as well as meet new people.

Residents could also participate in learning exercises such as the Race to be Safe, where contestants battled against the clock to put a condom correctly on the model while wearing beer goggles. This activity demonstrated how poor sexual decisions are made while under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

Kathleen Kock, the event's organizer and a UNO/UNMC master of public health program student, demonstrated the damage oil-based lubricants do to condoms.

After merely minutes, the Vaseline-lathered condom broke into pieces, showing potential health problems that could arise.

Kevin Ballew, coordinator for the hotline and youth programs at the Nebraska AIDS Project, said he volunteered at the event because of its significance.

"Young people who want to protect themselves in regards to sex is very important," Ballew said.

With the alarmingly high rates of STDs in Douglas County, Ballew felt that providing students with information on abstinence and protection was crucial.

Kock also felt that arming students with the right information was essential. She said that among people aged 15-22, one in 33 had gonorrhea or chlamydia in 2002. She said that she wants to ensure that students living on campus have the information to make good and safe decisions for themselves.

Planned Parenthood representatives Kate Oelke Turner and April Christiansen wanted residents to know that their services aren't just for women. They also offer birth control, STD and HIV testing and sports physicals and flu shots.

Marcia Adler, director of UNO Student Health Services, hoped that participants took advantage of the information that was available.

"We want them to know where reliable sources are for accurate information," Adler said.

Currently Student Health Services is publishing a monthly newsletter entitled Healthy UNO that is aimed at keeping students informed about their health. Students can pick up a free copy of Healthy UNO at the Student Health Services office, the Health, Physical, Education and Recreation Building, and at each residence hall.

"We all need to come together to help young adults make wise choices about their sexual health," Kock said.

For more information contact Student Health Services at 554-2374 or visit them on the first floor of the Milo Bail Student Center.
